The Chapter of Bärđi Bäk khan in the Čingiz-nāmā of Ötämiš Hājjī Tolu Bay, ämīr of the Golden Horde

GÖNCÖL, CSABA*

Ottoman Era Research Group, University of Szeged,
Dugonics tér 13, 6720, Szeged, Hungary

Received: December 27, 2018 • Accepted: January 31, 2020

© 2021 The Author

ABSTRACT

In the past few years researchers of the history of the Golden Horde devoted considerable attention to formerly neglected chronicles written in Turkic in the successor states of the Ulus of Juči, particularly to the so called Čingiz-nāmā of Ötämiš Hājjī. Though this collection of genuine oral tradition is an indispensable source, a critical approach is oftentimes overlooked by the scholars using it. This paper aims to demonstrate how the historical consciousness of the populace of the Golden Horde altered the stories behind certain events. For this purpose, the story of Bärđi Bäk khan in the Čingiz-nāmā will be subjected to criticism.

KEYWORDS

Ötämiš Hājjī, Čingiz-nāmā, Bärđi Bäk khan, Tolu Bay, historiography of the steppe.

* Corresponding author. E-mail: csaba986@gmail.com

INTRODUCTION

Oral historical tradition of the populace of the Golden Horde, preserved in Turkic chronicles, connected the dissolution of the Batuid line with the actions of Bärdi Bäk khan (1357–1359). These sources usually explain the fratricide of the ruler with his lust for power and unwillingness to share it. One only needs to recall the words of Abu l-Ġāzī Bahadur khan (1644–1663), ruler and chronicler of the Khanate of Ĥiwa: ‘He (Bärdi Bäk khan – Cs. G.) speared no one from is older or younger brothers, from his siblings and kin (qarındaş uruġında), because he wanted the country (yurt) forever for himself. He did not know that the word is temporal. In the end his rule did not last two years. In the year 762 (11 November 1360 – 01 November 1361 – Cs. G.) he died. The lineage (äwlad) of Şayın khan ceased at Bärdi Bäk’ (Abu l-Ġāzī/Desmaisons 1970²: 176–177).

However, there is a chronicle from the Khanate of Ĥiwa which tells us a different motive for Bärdi Bäk khan’s fratricide. Its writer, Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi b. Mävlänä Muḥammad Dösti, served in the courts of Şaybānid Ilbars khan (c. 1511–1518), and later İş Muḥammad Sulṭān, brother of Döst Muḥammad khan (c. 1556–1558). Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi was a gatherer of oral traditions circulating on the steppe (qarī söz), with which he became renowned. In the 1550s İş Muḥammad Sulṭān summoned him to his court and commissioned him to compile a book on the history of the Ĵučids. Based on the traditions he collected, Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi drafted his chronicle, in scholarly literature known as the Ĉingiz-nāmā ‘Book of Genghis’ (Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi/Kawaguchi and Nagamine 2008: 6–8).¹

Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi was aware that historical consciousness influenced oral traditions and that they change time to time: ‘It is [well] known – he writes – that most of the words one hears with ears are lies.’ (Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi/Kawaguchi and Nagamine 2008: 8). Changes in the tradition of certain events, however, can be an excellent asset to modern historians, given we are able to map these. The aim of this paper is to scrutinize the plot of Bärdi Bäk khan’s story in Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi’s Ĉingiz-nāmā and compare its details to the testimony of Russian and Persian sources on the same event. Through a comparison we are able to establish two versions of the same story: a ‘how it must have happened’ – basically how modern historians evaluate the events – and ‘how the people thought it happened’ – the version Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi transmitted.² The difference between the two may shed light on some basic characteristics of oral traditions of the Later Golden Horde. Additionally, this paper will provide information on Tolu Bay, an important, but little known figure in Bärdi Bäk khan’s court.

¹ On the author and his work consult Bartol’d 1973: 164; Togan 1981: 147–148; DeWeese 1994: 142; Kawaguchi and Nagamine 2010: 47–48; Kafalı 2009: 20–25; Mirgaleev 2011; Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi/Mirgaleev 2017: 6.

² There is an unfolding scholarly debate about the character of Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi’s work. While some scholars view the Ĉingiz-nāmā as a collection of authentic steppe tradition (Bartol’d 1973: 166; Togan 1981²: 148; Yudin et al. 1992: 25; DeWeese 1994: 142; Kawaguchi and Nagamine 2010: 48–50) others regard it as a compilation of earlier written sources (Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi/ Mirgaleev 2017: 12). I myself regard the stories of Ötämiş Ĥäĵĵi’s chronicle as oral traditions influenced by the author’s pro-Şaybānid sympathies.

ÖTÄMIŞ HAJJĪ'S STORY OF BÄRDI BÄK KHAN

The story of Bärdi Bäk khan in the Čingiz-nāmā unfolds as follows:³

The beginning of Bärdi Bäk khan's story: [Ĵāni Bäk khan's] son, Bärdi Bäk became khan on his father's throne. Bärdi Bäk was a severely mindless and ill-judged person. Claiming that 'The power (hānliq) belongs to me!' he killed his own brothers and his own sons. They say there was a man by the name of Qangli Tolu Bay, whose brothers and tribe were extremely powerful. [He] was the tutor (ataliġi) of the khan. Whatever he said, [the khan never] neglected his word. He (i. e. Tolu Bay – Cs. G.) had a son, Sumay by name, a brave archer. In the time of Ĵāni Bäk khan, he committed roguery, and because of this the khan – May mercy be upon him! – had him killed. Tolu Bay, because of his grief for his son, gave the [following] advice [to Bärdi Bäk khan]: – Now you are a young man. Your son who was born today grows up tomorrow. Day by day you grow old. He becomes a young man and tomorrow, after you become old, he claims your power (hānliġing) [and] takes it. Kill them now! When you start to grow old, then leave one [of them] alive!' he said. This ill-fated took his advice and killed [them all]. Because of this, they call him '*Kötān*⁴ khan who wiped out his root.' In his reign the discord (tāfriqa-liq) increased greatly. Qiyat Mamay took the right wing, and with the clans (el kūn) went to the Crimea. Tengiz Buġa, the son of Qiyat Ĵir Qutli brought the left wing to the Syr Darya river. The khan with his entourage (iĉki) stayed in Saray. He ruled in Saray for three years, [and] died after.⁵

As it can be seen, the historical consciousness of the Golden Horde preserved the memory of the dissolution of the line of Batu and its connection with the reign of Bärdi Bäk khan. Further, it also recorded that a certain Tolu Bay was the mastermind behind the event, and it explains his actions as an act of revenge. This is basically the variant of 'how the people thought it had happened'. But what do other sources, Persian and Russian have to say about him and his role in Bärdi Bäk khan's actions?

HISTORICAL DATA ON TOLU BAY

First of all, we have to accept that Tolu Bay was a historical figure, his name appears in Turkic chronicles as Tolu Bay (Ötämiş Hājji) and Toli Bay ('Abdu l-Ġaffār Qirimi), in the Persian sources of Mu'in ad-Dīn Naṭanzī and Aḥmad Ġaffārī as T(o)ġlū/ T(u)ġlū Bāy (تغلو باي) (СМОИЗО II: 128–129; 211; 233–234; 267), in Russian annals as Товлүбий (ПСРЛ I: 228; ПСРЛ IV: 55, 63; ПСРЛ VIII: 10; ПСРЛ XV: 420) Тавлүбий (ПСРЛ X: 211), Товлүбиу (ПСРЛ XVIII: 93), Тувлүбу (ПСРЛ XXIII: 105), Товлүбьевом in dative case (ПСРЛ XXIII: 112), and in a charter preserved in the Venetian dialect as Tolobei and Tolobey (Grigor'ev and Grigor'ev 2002: 147, 160). All these variants go back to the same name and mirror regular sound changes in Kipchak Turkic languages.⁶ According to the Onomasticon Turcicum of Rásonyi and Baski, the name Tolu/Tulu was frequently used with the honorary title bay ‘wealthy’ (2007 II: 775–776), thus we have to treat Tolu Bay as the original form of the name. The bey/biy/bi forms of the Russian sources can be considered as misunderstanding of the far more frequent Turkic dignity of a beg/bey/biy. But who was Tolu Bay and why does oral tradition connect him to Bārdi Bāk khan’s fratricide?

³ Though there are a number of editions of the Čingiz-nāmā, there is no critical edition of it. By utilising the facsimiles of the Tashkent (Ötämiş Hājji/Yudin et al. 1992) and Istanbul (Ötämiş Hājji/Mirgaleev 2017) editions, I prepared a critical text with philological remarks on Bärdi Bäk khans reign, given in the appendix. The translation in this section follows the Tashkent manuscript, for alterations, consult the critical text.

⁴ The meaning of the word kötān 'bottom, ass' (Rásonyi and Baski 2007: 384), in this context it must have been a derogatory name given to the khan.

⁵ The same story is told by the 18th century Crimean historian 'Abdu l-Ġaffār Qirimi in his 'Umdetü l-aḥbār 'Essence of histories' (Esad ef. 2331, fol. 264v–265r, 'Abdu l-Ġaffār/Derin Paşaoğlu 2014: 77–78). Since 'Abdu l-Ġaffār had access to the Čingiz-nāmā itself, or they have a common source (Kawaguchi and Nagamine 2010: 50), here I restrict my research only on Ötämiş Hājji's work.

TOLU BAY’S ROLE IN BĀRDI BĀK KHAN’S ACCESSION TO THE THRONE

In the fall of 1356 Ĵānī Bāk khan invaded and seized Azerbaijan, installed his son Bārdi Bāk as governor (hākīm) and left for Sarāy. The khan fell ill already during the campaign or shortly after arriving in Sarāy (Safargaliev 1960: 107–108; Gračyov 2011: 50–58). What happened next is summed up in great detail in the chronicle of Mu‘in ad-Dīn Naṭanzī. Toġlū Bāy, ‘a pillar of the state’ of Ĵānī Bāk khan – as Naṭanzī refers to him – sent a message to Bārdi Bāk about his father’s illness, and called him to Sarāy. However, the khan’s health improved. He learnt of the arrival of his son, and this made him suspicious. He consulted the matter with his wife Toġāy Toġlū hātūn,⁷ the mother of Bārdi Bāk and with Toġlū Bāy, ‘unaware that he was the wind of this malice’ as Naṭanzī eloquently writes. Both Toġāy Toġlū hātūn and Toġlū Bāy denied Bārdi Bāk’s arrival. Not much later Toġlū Bāy, together with some of his men killed Ĵānī Bāk khan and everyone who did not submit to their will. The conspirators then installed Bārdi Bāk as khan. He, in turn, supposed to have said the following to Toġlū Bāy: ‘I will kill the whole of the kin (urūġ), just as you killed Muqsān qarajū.’ Toġlū Bāy – we are told – approved these words. He gathered all the princes, and [Bārdi] Bāk suddenly killed all of them.’ He is even supposed to have murdered his 6 months old brother himself (Tizengausen 1941.II.: 128–129; 233–234).

Among the specialists of the Golden Horde Naṭanzī is regarded as an untrustworthy source (Schamiloglu 1986: 165–170; Sabitov 2010: 151, 154), but in this case his data is unanimously corroborated by a number of Russian annals. The Patriaršaya/Nikonovskaya letopis’ also describe the events in details. According to them Tovlubij, a wise and evil temnik (тёмник), i. e. leader of a military contingent of ten thousand men, wanting to rule all the land, persuaded Bārdi Bāk to kill his father and take his throne. He gathered supporters from the tribal aristocracy (князь) to his cause. Bārdi Bāk, together with tribal leaders suffocated the khan and killed twelve of his brothers

⁶ The word derives from the East Old Turkic tuġlīg ‘having ... standard(s)’ (ED: 469) and it is formed from the base tuġ ‘a royal emblem’ (ED: 464, Doerfer 1965 II: 618–622) and the suffix +lUG forming adjectives (Eckmann 1966: 56–57; Bodrogligeti 2001: 102–104). Different forms of the name mirror stages of sound changes in Kipchak languages, namely the labialisation of word-end ġ: ġ > w > ø (Johanson 1998: 100). The oldest forms of the name appear interestingly in the 15–16th century Persian chronicles: ṭ(u)ġlū or ṭ(o)ġlū, with the final ġ preserved in tuġ (but interestingly not on the suffix!). This would mean that Mu‘in ad-Dīn Naṭanzī and Ġaffārī utilised sources/traditions in which these sound shifts did not come to pass. In the 14th century monument of the Kipchak language, the Codex Cumanicus the word appears as tov ‘insignia’, t. i. insignia (Grønbech 1942: 250), this corresponds to the forms of the Russian annals Товлубій, Тавлубій, etc. where we encounter the already labialised form. The variant of Ötāmiš Ḥājjī (Tolu Bay) and ‘Abdu l-Ġaffār (Tolī Bay) represent therefore the newest forms, as can be seen in a number of modern Kipchak languages: Kirgiz: tuu ‘знамя, стяг’ and tuuluu ‘со знаменем, со стягом’ (Yudahin 1965: 771–772), Kazakh tu ‘standard, banner’ (Shitnikov 1966: 205).

⁷ Toġāy Toġlū hātūn is certainly the wife of Özbāk khan, mother of Ĵānī Bāk khan and grandmother of Bārdi Bāk khan, Tajdula in Russian annals. On her name and variants see Pelliot 1949: 101–105.

(ПСПЛ X.: 229).⁸ Even if the description differs in some minor details, they clearly state that Bärđi Bäk seized the throne by a conspiracy and Tolu Bay was on the forefront of the events. This variant of the story – as the sources are earlier, unconnected and unanimous – can be regarded as the ‘how it must have happened’.

FURTHER REFERENCES ON TOLU BAY

Russian chronicles contain a range of additional data on Tolu Bay and his carrier.⁹ By scrutinizing these we may verify some of Ötämiš Hājjī’s details on Tolu Bay on the one hand, and gain insight into the carrier of Tolu Bay on the other.

In 1339 Özbäk khan summoned the prince of Tver, Aleksandr Mihajlovič (1301–1339). He was charged with organising a plot against Tatar rule in the Rus’ principalities and was eventually killed by the men of the khan.¹⁰ Among them the author of the Terskoj sbornik mentions Tovlubij who headed the execution (ПСПЛ XV.: 420). Later that year a number of Russian annals report on a joint Tatar-Rus’ punitive expedition against the town of Smolensk, whose prince refused to pay their taxes. On the head of the troops the sources mention a ‘mighty envoy’ (посоль), Tovlubij (ПСПЛ X.: 211; ПСПЛ XV.: 424;). It is safe to assume that the Tovlubij of Aleksandr Mihajlovič’s execution and the ‘envoy’ leading the forces against Smolensk are one and the same. In any case it is clear that this Tovlubij was not just an executioner and an ‘envoy’, but also a high ranking member of the military organisation of the Golden Horde, having a considerable number of Tatar and tributary troops at his disposal.¹¹

For the next two decades there is no information on Tolu Bay neither in Russian, nor in Persian sources. He reappears only in connection to the plot against Jāni Bäk khan. The charters of the Golden Horde khans usually mention the highest dignitaries of the state organisation. Since neither the charters of Özbäk, nor Jāni Bäk khan list his name, Safargaliev came to the conclusion that Tolu Bay must have been an ‘āmīr of second grade’ (Safargaliev 1960: 109) which seems reasonable, with the remark that he was influential enough to initiate a successful coup d’état.¹² At the time of the plot, he must have been a higher dignitary of the military organisation, since Gaffāri calls him as an amīri-i laškar ‘commander of the army’ (Tizengausen 1941.II.: 211, 267). Russian sources corroborate the Persian data, where he appears – as mentioned above – temnik (ПСПЛ X.: 229), i. e. Turkic tümen begi ‘leader of ten thousand men’. This piece of information – in my view – affirms the assumption, that Tolu Bay, the ‘envoy’ sent to Smolensk in 1339 and Tolu Bay of the coup d’état are one and the same person.

According to Ötämiš Hājjī, Tolu Bay could exercise power over Bärđi Bäk khan due to the khan’s ‘mindlessness’ and ‘ill-judgement’ (bī-‘aql wā bī-mulāḥaḥa kiši erdi), and to the fact that he was the tutor (ataliq) of the khan (Ötämiš Hājjī/Kawaguchi and Nagamine 2008: 31, 87–88).

⁸ See further ПСПЛ IV.: 63.

⁹ References on Tolu Bay in Russian and Persian sources are given in the work of Seleznyov 2009: 177–178.

¹⁰ For an overview of the event and further literature on them see Hautala 2017: 471–474.

¹¹ Although the Nikonovskaya or Patriaršaya letopis’ also mention a certain Mengukaš’ together with Tolu Bay, the command of the troops seems to have been assigned to the later (Seleznyov 2009: 128–129).

¹² Safargaliev (1960: 109) claims that Tolu Bay remained in the capital and started the organisation of the plot already during Jāni Bäk khan’s campaign against Azerbaijan. Though his claim seems reasonable, there are no sources supporting it.

Russian annals also suggest a certain form of tutorship to Tolu Bay. He is either called an učitel' (учитель) 'tutor' on the one hand (ПСРЛ X.: 229), and predstatel' (предстатель), an archaic Russian word for 'protector, patron' on the other (ПСРЛ V.: 228; ПСРЛ VIII.: 10; ПСРЛ XXIII.: 112). It seems that in this instance the oral tradition preserved trustworthy details of Tolu Bay.

If we take a closer look at some sources describing the execution of Alexandr Mihajlovič, we can raise serious questions about the tribal affiliation of Tolu Bay. As cited above, Ötāmiš Hājji thought him to come from the tribe Qangli, a statement which was accepted by scholars as Isxakov (2009: 51) and Sabitov (2014: 130). For an unknown reason, the Grigor'evs without any ground thought him to be a leader of the Bağrīn tribe (Grigor'ev and Grigor'ev 2002: 125; Grigor'ev 2004: 87). The author of the 16th century Tverskoj Sbornik, however, mentions Tolu Bay as a Cherkes: 'Prince Aleksandr raised his eyes, ordered the fifth prayer (пети часы), his final prayer [to be sung]; he raised his eyes and saw the Čerkes heading to his tent, Tatars with him who ran him over. They mercilessly grappled him, wrestled him, tore down his clothes, placed him before Tovlubij naked and tied up. And he [Tovlubij – Cs. G.], the infidel sitting on a horse, surrounded by numerous Tatars, made his damned voice be heard: Kill him! And they grabbed prince Aleksandr and his son, prince Feodor, they stabbed them mercilessly, laid them on the ground, cut their heads off; and thus they met their end, excepted such fait for the Christian nation' (ПСРЛ XV.: 420).¹³ The Patriaršaya/Nikonovskaya letopis' mention two persons at the execution of the prince, a certain 'Berkan' and 'Čerkas' (ПСРЛ X.: 210). Keeping the entry of the Tverskoj sbornik in mind, it is safe to assume that the later refers to Tolu Bay. We already saw that Ötāmiš Hājji and some Russian annals call Tolu Bay as the tutor (ataliq, учитель, предстатель) of Bārdi Bāk khan. We know little of the ataliqs of the Golden Horde, but in the period of the Later Golden Horde the princes of the Crimean and Kazan' Khanats, even the sons of the Nogay biys were raised among the Cherkes of the Caucasus (Belyakov, Vinogradov and Moiseev 2007: 413). This practice might as well go back to the Golden Horde period. The 17th century compilation of oral traditions of the Volga area, another Čingiz-nāmā also connects the youth of Bārdi Bāk khan to the Cherkes (Ivanics and Usmanov 2011: 83; Ivanics 2017: 252). In my view all this points out that we should link Tolu Bay to the Cherkes, and not to the Qangli. Be it as it may, this piece of data about the origin of Tolu Bay in the Čingiz-nāmā of Ötāmiš Hājji should be treated with caution.

It was already mentioned that before the plot against Jāni Bāk khan the name of Tolu Bay did not appear on Golden Horde charters, which means that he was not among the highest members of the state organisation, the so called four ulus begs. According to the charter of Bārdi Bāk khan given to the Venetians in 1358, the number of the ulus begs rose to six, and Tolu Bay was listed fifth among them (Grigor'ev and Grigor'ev 2002: 160). This means that the dignity and power of Tolu Bay rose, undeniably his support to the khan had a major role in this. It is safe to assume that contrary to his fifth place in the charter, he became a leading figure after the khan (Safargaliev 1960: 110), maybe a sort of eminence grise. The same charter also testifies that Tolu Bay was rewarded with a share of the customs in Azov (Grigor'ev and Grigor'ev 2002: 148, 152).

¹³ Князь же Александръ взведе очи свои, повеле пети часы; се же им кончавшим часы, и взведе очи свои, и видевъ Черкас, идуще прямо к веже своей, и с ним Татарове, и выскочи противу его. Они же немилостивый похватишиа его, възложи(ша) назад, и оборвашиа порты его, и поставишиа и перед Товлубием нага связана. Оному же незаконному стоащу на коне, и с ним множество Татар, испусти океанный глас свой: «убийте.» Они же емше князя Алекса́нда и сына его князя Феодора, без милости прободоша, и поврѣгоша на земли, отсекоша главы им; и тако скончашася, и приемише таковую кончину за род христианский.

In the short reign of Bärdi Bäk khan his power – according to all sources – deteriorated. Ötemiš Hājji states that the clans of the Golden Horde migrated to the Crimea and to the vicinity of the Syr Darya under the rule of clan leaders, Mamay and Tengiz Buğa. The khan on the other hand remained in the capital Sarāy, only with his entourage (ički), where he died of sickness. To the contrary of Ötemiš Hājji's narrative Russian sources tell a different story. They mention a certain Kulpa, who challenged the rule of the khan. Ironically, Kulpa – according to the study of Grigor'ev (1983: 22–26) – managed to take Azov, zone of interest of Tolu Bay, and minted his coins already in 1358. Though sources – both written and numismatic – for these events are scarce, it is clear that Kulpa took the capital next year, overthrew and killed Bärdi Bäk. The Patriaršaya/Nikonovskaya letopis' portrays these events vividly under the year 1359: 'In the summer of the same year, car' Berdibek, son of Čyanibek, grandson of Azbyak, was killed in the Horde; and with [his] his well-wisher, the wretched Tolubiy, an evil and powerful knyaz', and other counsellors of his [he] drank out the same cup that he filled for his father and brother[s]' (ПСПЛ X.: 230–231).¹⁴ The mere fact that the annals mention only Tolu Bay by name points out his might and influence in the affairs of the Golden Horde. Since numismatic finds corroborate the details of our Russian sources, we have every reason to give credit to them.

CONCLUSIONS

When we compare the evidence of Persian and Russian sources to Ötāmiš Hājji's plot of Bärdi Bäk khan, it becomes clear that the historical consciousness erased the memory of the plot against Ĵāni Bäk khan, it kept only the dissolution of the Batuid line and its connection to Tolu Bay. In an interesting manner, it also recorded the fact that he was the tutor of the khan. So the plot had a deed, a villain, it required only a motive for Tolu Bay. Thus, the historical consciousness constructed one, namely that Tolu Bay was acting because of personal motives, trying to avenge his son. We might even consider this phenomenon as a feature of steppe historiography. It operates with historical events and persons, it even preserves trustworthy details of some individuals, but at the same time it deploys fictional elements, motives to explain a plot. From this analysis we can conclude that the Čingiz-nāmā of Ötāmiš Hājji is a valuable asset for the study of the Golden Horde, but the traditions it preserved could change considerably. Every detail of the chronicle must be approached with criticism and at the same time it is of paramount importance to corroborate it with other sources or group of sources.

APPENDIX

In the following I give a critical text of Bärdi Bäk khan's reign from the Čingiz-nāmā. The facsimile of the Tashkent manuscript (ÖĤt) – published in Yudin et al. 1992 – serves as the principal text which is supplemented by the one in Istanbul (ÖĤi) – published by Mirgaleev 2017. Words, suffixes etc. absent in the ÖĤt but present in the ÖĤi are given in (round brackets), unreadable words with (---), interpolations in [square brackets]. Different wordings of the ÖĤi are given in footnotes. Since the remarks on the margin of the ÖĤi seems to originate from a version of the ÖĤt, I leave them from the critical text.

¹⁴ Того же лета во Орде убиен бысть царь Бердибек, сын Чянибеков, внук Азбяков, и з доброхотом своим окаанным Товлубием, князем темным и силным, и со иными советники его; и испи тую же чашу, еюже напоил отца своего и братью свою.

Editions utilised are ÖĤt/ Yudin et al. 1992: 135; ÖĤt/Kawaguchi and Nagamine 2008: 31–32; 87–88; ÖĤi/Kafalı 2009: 128; ÖĤi/Mirgaleev 2017: 239–240, 221.

āgāz-i dastān-i Bārdi Bāk hān¹⁵ oğlı Bārdi Bāk (hān) atası tahtında¹⁶ hān boldi Bārdi Bāk¹⁷ bāsi¹⁸ bi-‘aql wā bi-mulāḥaḥa¹⁹ kişi erdi özining qarındaşları²⁰ taqı öz oğlanlarını manga hānliq talaşur deb²¹ öltürür erdi ayturlar Qanlı Tolu Bay tegān qawmı qarındaş[i] köb küjlük kişi erdi bu hānniñ atalıgı erdi hār nā aysa²² anıñ sözindin çıqmaz²³ erdi anıñ bir oğlı bar erdi Şumay²⁴ atlıg alp²⁵ atğuçı erdi ol Şumay²⁶ (ḥazrāt-i) Ĵānı Bāk hān zamānında qaraqçılıq²⁷ qılur erdi anıñ jihatidin²⁸ hān ‘alāyhi r-raḥmāt anı öltürüb erdi Tolu Bay ol²⁹ oğliniñ aĵığidin bu kängäşni ol berür aytur³⁰ erdi sen ḥālā³¹ yigit turur-sen³² bu maḥall-daqi³³ toğğan oğlıñ tang ösär³⁴ sen kündin küngä qarır-sen ol yigit bolur(lar) tangla sen qarigandın song hānliğing-ni talaşib³⁵ alğay ḥālā bular-ni öltürä (---) tur-ğil qačan qarı başlasang andın song³⁶ (birāwni) qoyğay-sen ter edi (sic!) ol bi-dāwlāt hām munung³⁷ sözigä kirib öltürür erdi bu sābābdin anga kögin³⁸ (qırğan) kōtān hān terlār anıñ zamānında tāfriqa-liq bisyār boldi ong qolnı Qiyat³⁹ Mamay alıp el kün

¹⁵ ÖĤi: missing.

¹⁶ ÖĤi: yerindā

¹⁷ ÖĤi: bu

¹⁸ ÖĤi: bās

¹⁹ ÖĤi: bi-‘aql wā bi-mulāḥaḥa

²⁰ ÖĤi: qarındaşlarını

²¹ ÖĤi: teb

²² ÖĤi: ol hār nā aysa

²³ ÖĤi: aşlan tājāwüz qılmas

²⁴ ÖĤi: Şumari

²⁵ ÖĤi: alıp

²⁶ ÖĤi: missing.

²⁷ ÖĤi: qaraqçılıq

²⁸ ÖĤi: ol jihatdin

²⁹ ÖĤi: māzkūr

³⁰ ÖĤi: ol berā (?) aydı

³¹ ÖĤi: missing.

³² ÖĤi: yigit-durur-sen

³³ ÖĤi: mahall-daqi

³⁴ ÖĤi: oğlanlarınıñ birlā tang öşärsin

³⁵ ÖĤi: tilāşib (?)

³⁶ ÖĤi: missing.

³⁷ ÖĤi: munıñ

³⁸ The Tashkent manuscript has the form كركين, thus its editors read kerākin (Ötāmiş Hāĵji/Kawaguchi and Nagamine 2008: 89) and kārkin (Ötāmiş Hāĵji/Yudin et al. 1992: 135). Although the manuscript supports this reading – the word kārkin is documented in Teleut ‘ein großer Dolch’ (Radloff 1960² II.: 1100) – I would suggest that the scribe copying the manuscript made a lapsus calami. The wording in Istanbul manuscript, which has kögin qırğan ‘the one who wiped out his roots’, fits the fratricidal actions of Bārdi Bāk khan better. A similar phrase (kögin uyu-ğan kōtān hān) on Bārdi Bāk khan can be found in a manuscript of the 17th century Çingiz-nāmā of the Volga region, see Mustakimov 2009: 123.

³⁹ ÖĤi: Written erroneously as قیالی. The correct should be Qiyat.

birlä⁴⁰ Qırım-ğa kitdi sol qolnı (50b) Qıyat Ĵır Qutlı oĝlı⁴¹ Tengiz Buĝa Sır dāryāsı boynıĝa⁴² alıp kitdi ĥān öz(i) içki(si) birlä(n) Sarāyda boldı⁴³ üç yıl Sarāy šāhindā pādīšāh boldı⁴⁴ andın song wāfāt boldı⁴⁵

ABBREVIATIONS

ED = Clauson 1972.

ПСРЛ = Полное собрание русских летописей.

ZC [3ц] = Mirgaleev 2008.

REFERENCES

- ‘Abu l-Ġaffār Qırīmī (n. d.) ‘Umdetü l-aḥbār. MS in: Süleymaniye Yazma Eserler Kütüphanesi Istanbul, Esad ef. 2331.
- BARTOL’D, Vasilij Vladimirovič [Бартольд, Василий Владимирович] 1973. ‘Отчет о командировке в Туркестан’ In: Бартольд, Василий Владимирович Сочинения VIII. Москва: Наука, 119–210.
- BELIAKOV, Andrej Vasil’evič, Aleksandr Vadimovič VINOGRADOV and Maksim Vladimirovič MOISEEV [Беляков, Андрей Васильевич и Виноградов, Александр Вадимович и Моисеев, Максим Владимирович] 2017. ‘Институт аталичества в постзолотоордынском мире.’ Золотоордынское обозрение 5/2: 412–436.
- BODROGLIGETI, András, J. E. 2001. A Grammar of Chagatay. [Languages of the Word/Materials 155] Muenchen: Lincom Europa.
- CLAUSON, Gerard 1972. An Etymological Dictionary of Pre-Thirteenth-Century Turkish. Oxford: Clarendon Press.
- ECKMANN, János 1966. Chagatay Manual. [Indiana University Publications, Uralic and Altaic Series 60.] The Hague: Mouton and Co.
- DERIN PAŞAOĞLU, Derya [Дерин Пашаоглу, Деря] 2014. Абдулгаффар Кырыми: Умдет ал-ахбар. [Серия «Язма мирас. Письменное наследие. Textual Heritage.» Выпуск 1] Казань: Институт истории им. Ш. Марджани АН РТ.
- DESMAISONS, Petr I. 1970². Histoire des Mongols et des Tatars par Aboul-Ghâzi Bêhâdour Khân. Amsterdam: Philo Press.
- DEWEESE, Devin A. 1994. Islamization and Native Religion in the Golden Horde. Baba Tükles and Conversion to Islam in Historical and Epic Tradition. [Hermeneutics: Studies in the History of Religion] Pennsylvania: Pennsylvania State University Press.
- DOERFER, Gerhard 1963–1975. Türkische und mongolische Elemente im Neupersischen. 4 Vols. Wiesbaden: Franz Steiner Verlag.

⁴⁰ ÖĤi: missing.

⁴¹ ÖĤi: missing.

⁴² ÖĤi: b.w.y.k.ā (?)

⁴³ ÖĤi: bolur edi

⁴⁴ ÖĤi: pādīšāh-liq qāldi

⁴⁵ ÖĤi: tapdı

- GRAČYOV, Anton Igorevič [Грачёв, Антон Игоревич] 2011. 'Поход хана Джанибека в Иран в 1356–1357 гг. Анализ и реконструкция хронологии событий.' In: Зц Выпуск 4: 47–58.
- GRIGOR'EV, Arkadij Petrovič [Григорьев, Аркадий Петрович] 1983. 'Золотоордынские ханы 60–70-х годов XIV в.: хронология правлений.' Историография и источниковедение истории стран Азии и Африки Выпуск 7. 9–54.
- GRIGOR'EV, Arkadij Petrovič [Григорьев, Аркадий Петрович] 2004. Сборник ханских ярликов русским митрополитам. Историко-ведческий анализ золотоордынских документов. Санкт-Петербург: Издательство Санкт-Петербургского университета.
- GRIGOR'EV, Arkadij Petrovič and GRIGOR'EV, Vadim Pavlovič. [Григорьев, Аркадий Петрович и Вадим Павлович] 2002. Коллекция золотоордынских документов XIV века из Венеции. Историческое исследование. Санкт-Петербург: Издательство Санкт-Петербургского университета.
- GRÖNBECN, Kare 1942. Komanisches Wörterbuch. Türkischer Wortindex zu Codex Cumanicus. [Monumenta Linguarum Asiae Maioris Subsidia I.] København, Einar Munksgaard.
- Hautala, Roman 2017. 'Russian Chronicles on the Religious Policy of Uzbek Khan (1313–1341) and his Relations with the Principalities of the North-Eastern Rus' In: Hautala, Roman 2017. Crusaders, Missionaries and Eurasian Nomads in the 13th–14th Centuries: a Century of Interactions. Ed. by: SPINEL, Victor. [Florilegium magistrorum historiae archeologiaeque Antiquitatis et Medii Aevi XXI.] București – Brăila: Editura Academiei Române – Editura Istros a Muzeul Brăilei „Carol I”. 455–477.
- ISHAKOV, Damir Mavyaveevič [Исхаков, Дамир Мавявеевич] 2009. Исторические очерки. [Biblioteka Tatarica] Казань: Фэн.
- IVANICS, Mária and USMANOV, Mikrasym Abdulhatovič 2002. Das Buch der Dschingis-Legende (Dāftār-i Čingiz-nāmā) I. [Studia uralo-altaica 44.] Szeged: Quality Print.
- IVANICS, Mária 2017. Hatalomgyakorlás a steppén. [Magyar Történelmi Emlékek Értekezések] Budapest: MTA BTK Történettudományi Intézet.
- JOHANSON, Lars 1998. 'The History of Turkic.' In: Lars JOHANSON and Éva Á. CSATÓ (eds.) The Turkic Languages. London – New York: Routledge: 81–125.
- KAFALI, Mustafa 2009. Ötemiş Hacı'ya göre Cuci ulusu'nun tarihi. [Türk Tarihi Araştırma Enstitüsü Yayınları] Ankara: Öncü Basımevi.
- KAWAGUCHI, Takushi [川口琢司] and HIROYUKI NAGAMINE 長峰博之 2008. ウテミシュ・ハージ: チンギズ・ナーマ. Ōtamiš Hāji: Čingiz-nāma. [Studia Culturae Islamicae No. 94] Tokyo: Fujiwara Printing Co.
- KAWAGUCHI, Takushi and NAGAMINE, Hiroyuki [Кавагучи, Такуши и Нагаминэ, Хироюки] 2010. 'Некоторые новые данные о «Чингиз-наме» Утемиша-хаджи: в системе историографии в Дашт-и Кипчаке.' Зц Выпуск 3: 44–52.
- MIRGALEEV, P'nur Midhatovič [Миргалеев, Ильнур Мидхатович] (ред.) 2008. Золотоордынская цивилизация. Сборник статей. Казань: Институт истории им. Ш. Марджани АН РТ.
- MIRGALEEV, P'nur Midhatovič [Миргалеев, Ильнур Мидхатович] 2011. '«Чингиз-наме» Утемиша хаджи: перспективы изучения.' In: Зц Выпуск 3: 14–19.
- MIRGALEEV, P'nur Midhatovič [Миргалеев, Ильнур Мидхатович] 2017. Утемиш Хаджи: Кара таварих. [Серия «Язма мирас. Письменное наследие. Textual Heritage.» Выпуск 4] Казань: Институт истории им. Ш. Марджани АН РТ.
- MUSTAKIMOV, P'yas Al'fredovič [Мустакимов, Ильяс Альфредович] 2009. 'Об одном списке «Дафтар-и Чингиз-наме».' In: Хакимов, Рафаиль Сибгатович (ред.) Средневековые тюрко-татарские государства. Сборник статей. Выпуск 1. Казань: Институт истории Ш. Марджани АН РТ. 122–131.
- PELLIOT, Paul 1949: Notes sur l'histoire de la Horde d'Or: suivies de quelques nom turcs d'hommes et de peuples finissant en "ar". [Oeuvres posthumes de Paul Pelliot 2] Paris: Libr. d'Amérique et d'Orient.

- Полное собрание русских летописей I 1846. Лаврентевская и Троицкая летописи. Санктпетербург: Типография Эдуарда Праца.
- Полное собрание русских летописей IV 1848. Новгородская и Псковская летописи. Санктпетербург: Типография Эдуарда Праца.
- Полное собрание русских летописей V 1851. Псковская и Софийская летописи. Санктпетербург: Типография Эдуарда Праца.
- Полное собрание русских летописей VIII 1859. Продолжение летописи по Воскресенскому списку. Санктпетербург: Типография Эдуарда Праца.
- Полное собрание русских летописей X 1885. Летописный сборник, именуемый Патриаршею или Никоновскою летописью. Санктпетербург: Типография министерства внутренних дел.
- Полное собрание русских летописей XV 1863. Летописный сборник, именуемый Тверскою летописью. Санктпетербург: Типография Леонида Демиса.
- Полное собрание русских летописей XVIII 1913. Симеоновская летопись. Санктпетербург: Типография М. А. Александрова.
- Полное собрание русских летописей XXIII 1910. Ермолинская летопись. Санктпетербург: Типография М. А. Александрова.
- RADLOFF, Friedrich Wilhelm 1960². Versuch eines Wörterbuches der Türk-Dialekte. 4 Vols. The Hauge – Rijswijk: Mouton & Co. – Krips Repro.
- RÁSONYI, László and BASKI, Imre 2007. Onomasticon Turcicum. Turkic Personal Names as collected by László Rásonyi. 2 Vols. [Indiana University Uralic and Altaic Series] Bloomington: Indiana University, Denis Sinor Institute for Inner Asian Studies.
- САВИТОВ, Žaksylyk Muratovič [Сабитов, Жаксылык Муратович] 2010. 'Натанзи как источник по истории Золотой орды' In: 3я Выпуск 3: 150–155.
- САВИТОВ, Žaksylyk Muratovič [Сабитов, Жаксылык Муратович] 2014. 'Эмиры Узбек-хана и Джанибек-хана' Золотоордынское обозрение 2/4: 120–134.
- SAFARGALIEV, Magmet Garifovič [Сафаргалиев, Магмет Гарифович] 1960. Распад Золотой орды. Саранск: Мордовское книжное издательство.
- SCHAMIOGLU, Uli 1986. Tribal Politics and Social Organization in the Golden Horde. Columbia University: unpublished PhD dissertation.
- SELEZNYOV, Yurij Vasil'evič [Селезнёв, Юрий Васильевич] 2009. Элита Золотой орды. Казань: Фэн.
- SHITNIKOV, Boris Nikolajevich. 1966. Kazakh-English Dictionary. London – The Hague – Paris: Mouton & Co.
- TIZENGAUSEN, Vladimir Gustavovič [Тизенгаузен, Владимир Густавович] 1941. Сборник материалов относящихся к истории Золотой орды II. Извлечения из персидских сочинений. Москва–Ленинград: Издательство академии наук СССР.
- TOGAN, Ahmed Zeki Velidi 1981². Bugünkü Türkili (Türkistan) ve yakın tarihi. Cilt I. Batı ve kuzey Türkistan. İstanbul: Enderun Kitabevi.
- YUDACHIN, Konstantin Kuz'miç [Юдахин, Константин Кузьмич] 1956. Киргизко-русский словарь. Москва: Издательство «Советская энциклопедия».
- YUDIN, Veniamin Petrovič et al. [Юдин, Вениамин Петрович et al.] 1992. Утемиш-хаджи: Чингиз-наме. Алма-ата: Ғылым.

Open Access. This is an open-access article distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License (<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/>), which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original author and source are credited, a link to the CC License is provided, and changes – if any – are indicated. (SID_1)