On p. 37 of the article, ‘ketamine’ was accidentally included in a list:

“Not anticipated by the US Controlled Substances Act, such bifurcations have been created on an ad hoc basis, for cannabinoids, gamma hydroxybutyrate, and ketamine (Ismail Lourido Ali, personal communication, June 19, 2019), offering the FDA a legal mechanism by which to create markets for tightly regulating licit use while avoiding concerns with or backlash from rescheduling substances in toto.”

This paragraph listing should not include ‘ketamine’. Thus, the paragraph should read as follows:

“Not anticipated by the US Controlled Substances Act, such bifurcations have been created on an ad hoc basis, for cannabinoids and gamma hydroxybutyrate (Ismail Lourido Ali, personal communication, June 19, 2019), offering the FDA a legal mechanism by which to create markets for tightly regulating licit use while avoiding concerns with or backlash from rescheduling substances in toto.”
